Football's campaign to counter extremism takes off worldwide

BY GEOFF BAKER

geoff@londonweeklynews.co.uk

WEST London's amazing Football For Unity counter-extremism campaign has now grown into a team of 1,400 teenage players who'll soon be playing in Downing Street, Vatican City and on the White House lawn as world leaders clamour to join their statesmen-studded supporters' club.

The movement – which blocks Islamist internet radicalisation and gang culture by turning at-risk youngsters onto football instead – now has Prime Minister David Cameron, President Obama and Pope Francis cheering on their pioneering squad.

Football For Unity has become London's fastest-growing youth movement. Every week new faces join Tuff FC [The Unity of Faiths Foundation Football Club] and now the Football Association is signing up to the new unity initiative.

Heathrow expansion idea crash-lands

THE Mayor of London believes the Government's decision to delay a verdict on where to build new aviation capacity in the south east is a clear indication they are beginning to realise that the obstacles in the path of expanding Heathrow are insurmountable, and that a third runway can never be built there.

This week he urged the Government to end decades of debate by definitively ruling out expansion at Heathrow and giving proper consideration to building a bigger and better airport on one of several potential sites to the east of the capital. The evidence presented to the Government by the Airports Commission already makes it clear that looking east of London would offer the greatest economic potential and is the only feasible way of giving the country the aviation capacity it needs for the long term future.

Mr Johnson said: "Today is the day that the Heathrow campaign was officially grounded. They have put a super-human effort into bouncing the Government into a quick decision in their favour but the Prime Minister and his colleagues have refused to allow themselves to be hustled. The wheels are falling off the Heathrow fuselage and I think that, now the Government has hit the pause button, they will begin to understand with ever greater clarity that, due to the environmental impacts, the legal obstacles and the cost to the public purse, this bird will never fly.

FROM THE

"But delay is not the answer. While Britain's European rivals continue to forge ahead with the construction of multi-runway mega-airports, I have long argued that the most dynamic and forward-looking approach would be to look at the sites east of London where a four-runway hub airport could be built.

"To get to that position we need the Government definitively to rule out Heathrow expansion. I believe that this latest announcement makes that much more likely."

A new four-runway airport to the east of London would:

■ Connect the UK to more than 300 international destinations – far more than any alternative.

■ Serve 176 long haul destinations, more than an expanded Heathrow and an expanded Gatwick combined.

■ Provide direct connections to new and emerging markets and important economic centres like Belo Horizonte in Brazil, Calcutta in India and Chongqing in China.

■ Serve 16 UK cities, many more than an expanded Heathrow or Gatwick could hope to serve.

■ Support 25 per cent more jobs nationally than a three-runway Heathrow and offers the greatest economic potential for the United Kingdom.

■ Expose less than five per cent of the people exposed to significant aircraft noise by Heathrow today – at best, the numbers exposed would be virtually zero.

■ A new hub would not exceed EU air quality limits or risk delaying UK compliance.

Since his election in 2008 the mayor has made clear that his mayoralty would take a creative and open minded approach to the challenges facing the capital. He consistently argued that the reason expansion plans for Heathrow or Gatwick have been debated for several decades is that neither is the answer to the problem.

A feasibility study into the possibility of building an airport in the Thames Estuary and two major reports on the need for new hub airport capacity published during his first term as mayor put the possibility of expansion away from Heathrow or Gatwick firmly on the public agenda. When the Government announced the establishment of the Airports Commission in 2012 the mayor made very clear his determination to engage with every aspect of the research carried out by the Commission.

The mayor's team submitted hundreds of pages of independent research to the commission, which clearly showed the limitations at Heathrow and Gatwick compared to the incredible economic potential of expansion to the east of London. When the commission rejected any possibility of building at Stansted or in the Thames Estuary (despite acknowledging that the benefits associated with building to the east were potentially greater than any of the other options they considered) the mayor predicted that proposals to expand Heathrow would run into exactly the same hurdles they had met in the past, and that the recommendations made by the Airports Commission would swiftly be made "irrelevant" – as now appears to be becoming the case.

It is clear expansion at Heathrow airport is impossible. A three-runway Heathrow would effectively be full shortly after opening, would expose one million people to unacceptable levels of aircraft noise and risk major EU fines for air pollution. It would simply be an environmental catastrophe and would never pass the legal, political or financial hurdles in its path.

The options for a four-runway hub airport to the east of London at Stansted or in the Thames estuary were discarded prematurely and the Government should give proper consideration to the only feasible plan, which is to build new runway capacity to the east of London where there is the space to build an airport of the size Britain needs to compete with its European rivals.

■ SENSATIONAL HORSEMANSHIP: The London International Horse Show returns to Olympia all this week.

Olympia salutes world's greatest equestrian stars

BY GEOFF BAKER
geoff@londonweeklynews.co.uk

THE world's favourite equestrian spectacular begins in Kensington this week with members of the Royal Family and 90,000 others visiting the London International Horse Show at Olympia.

The 108-year-old event, which runs from December 15 to 21, will be showcasing the very best horsemanship from around the globe, with events such as the Shetland Pony Grand National, show jumping and carriage driving.

After a packed-out show last year, organisers are expecting yet another record attendance as equestrian fans head on their annual pilgrimage to the famous Olympia Exhibition Halls to watch the world's top riders compete at the week-long equine extravaganza.

The hugely popular family event is the climax of the equestrian sporting calendar and offers the rare opportunity for spectators to see an array of Olympic legends and Rio 2016 hopefuls.

Top riders will include world number one and London 2012 Olympic gold medallist Scott Brash and recently qualified 2016 Olympic show jumping team Michael Whitaker, Joe Cleve, Ben Maher and Jessica Mendoza.

Charlotte Dujardin, the most successful British dressage rider in the history of the sport, will also be returning and aiming to break the world record in dressage freestyle for an unprecedented third year running.

The Olympia Horse Show not only hosts FEI World Cup™ competitions in show jumping, dressage and carriage driving, but also a feast of breathtaking equestrian displays throughout the event.

The expected 90,000 visitors will be treated to performances from French Horse Whisperer Jean-François Pignon, The Household Cavalry Musical Ride and all the old favourites, including The Shetland Pony Grand National, The Kennel Club Dog Agility and The Olympia Finale.

For more information and to purchase tickets online visit the website at www.olympiahorseshow.com or telephone the box office on 0871 230 5580.

EVENT HIGHLIGHTS

Here are some of the key competitions and dates to look out for this week at Olympia...

■ Tuesday 15 December Reem Acra FEI World Cup™ Dressage Leg - Grand Prix

■ Wednesday 16 December Reem Acra FEI World Cup™ Dressage Leg - Freestyle to Music

■ Thursday 17 December Alltech Christmas Puissance

■ Friday 18 December FEI World Cup™ Driving Leg presented by Dodson & Horrell

■ Saturday 19 December FEI World Cup™ Driving Leg Final presented by Dodson & Horrell

■ Sunday 20 December Longines FEI World Cup™ Jumping leg presented by H&M

■ Monday 21 December Olympia Grand Prix.

■ UPWARDLY MOBILE: Olympia crowds will lap up the equestrian action.

Victoria Road is top of the props at £8m

KENSINGTON'S Victoria Road is the most expensive residential street in England and Wales – with an average house price of £8,006,000 – according to new figures released last week.

The road, which is home to the Vietnamese embassy and where actor Dustin Hoffman is reported to have a residence, came out on top of a list of the priciest streets published by Lloyds Bank on Friday.

All the top 50 most expensive streets in England and Wales are located in southern England, with more than half (28) in London and a further 19 in the south-east. The Dorset town of Poole is the only place not in south-east England that makes it into the top 50.

Just a short distance from Kensington Palace, the London home of the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Victoria Road is made up of 64 properties, some of which date back to the 1840s. The Guardian reported that a six-bedroom house there sold for £13million in July 2014, and a five-bedroom apartment is currently being advertised on property website Rightmove for £7.95million.

In 1881, W S Clarke wrote in his book The Suburban Homes of London that Victoria Road “is noted for being inhabited by artists of high standing”. The neighbourhood today is said to be popular with hedge fund managers and overseas investors – but residents also praised its “village feel”.

In 2008, a flat in the road sold for £475,000 – a snip compared to today's prices. It is now likely to be worth almost £1.7million, according to property information website Mouseprice, which has put an estimated current value on each of the road's properties ranging from a hefty £925,800 to a staggering £19,956,000.

The data from Mouseprice, which uses Land Registry figures, suggests that this last-mentioned £19million property fetched £11.5million in early 2010.

Traditional Christmas

VISITORS to Kensington Palace this month will be transported back to the Victorian era – where Christmas as we know it today really began.

In the palace where Princess Victoria grew up, the sights, sounds, smells and tastes of a truly traditional Victorian celebration will be brought vividly to life through a series of talks, festive music and seasonal food and drink.

Throughout the season, the palace and gardens will be gloriously decked out in their Yuletide best with period-inspired decorations. Visitors can see the beautifully decorated tables where Victoria and Albert presented their carefully chosen Christmas gifts, as the Queen dutifully documented in her diaries. Gardening fans will be able to enjoy a stunning display of ‘forced flowers’ – reflecting the Victorian fashion for demonstrating gardening prowess by cultivating exotic fruits and vibrant flowers in winter.

Between Christmas and New Year, children will be able to get hands-on with interactive displays of Victorian Christmas memorabilia, from musical instruments to pantomime props.

Borough's young scholars go to the top of the class

TEACHERS and pupils in Kensington and Chelsea primary schools have cause to celebrate after Key Stage 2 (age 11) performance tables results were published last week by the Department for Education.

The results show that 91 per cent of children in Kensington and Chelsea achieved the expected Level 4+ in reading, writing and mathematics, up from 86 per cent last year; and, if the results of the two local authorities the DfE disregards for statistical purposes (due to low pupil numbers) are taken into account this places the borough top in the country.

There was even more good news when the borough came top nationally for the percentages of children making expected progress from Key Stage 1 to Key Stage 2 in each of reading, writing and mathematics.

In four borough schools, Colville, Servite, Thomas Jones and St Joseph's, 100 per cent of children achieved this standard for all four measures.

Cllr Emma Will, Cabinet Member for Education, said: "These are very impressive results and once again highlight the excellent teaching that our primary school pupils receive. I would like to thank all the teachers and school staff who work so hard to give our children such a fantastic education."

Latest figures on the published outcomes of Ofsted inspections confirm the quality of schools in the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea, say education chiefs.

According to the government inspectors all of the borough's secondary schools were rated as good or outstanding. Only eight local authorities in the country have achieved such impressive ratings.

Results for GCSEs, A-levels and Key Stage 2 regularly place Kensington and Chelsea pupils and students close to the top of national league tables. Exam results for children who receive free school meals in the Royal Borough are amongst the very best in the country.

Those eligible for free school meals receive funding known as the Pupil Premium. In 2015 the difference in Kensington and Chelsea between those who receive free school meals and those who do not was down to five percentage points, an improvement from eight per cent in 2014, and compared with fifteen per cent nationally. With such high-performing schools the demand for places at both primary and secondary remain high.

In recent years, the council has embarked on an ambitious school building and expansion programme. This has seen Holland Park School completely rebuilt and two brand new academies built in the borough – Chelsea Academy and Kensington Aldridge Academy.

There are advanced plans for a new primary school as well as extensive expansion and rebuilding projects for many of the borough's primaries.

Councillor Will said: "This is very good news for parents. I am very pleased that, when taken as a whole, the high standard of education that we all want to see our children receive can be found in our excellent secondary schools.

"This reflects so well on hard working and dedicated teaching staff, supportive families and the strong and consistent investment by the council over a number of years."

■ IN PURSUIT OF EXCELLENCE: Holland Park School was completely rebuilt.

Christmas blitz on wealthy boy racers

BY GEOFF BAKER

geoff@londonweeklynews.co.uk

POLICE in Kensington and Chelsea are launching a Christmas crackdown on the rich boy racers who have caused hundreds of complaints from residents – with new powers including £1,000 fines for leaving the engine running while parked.

Police and the Royal Borough Council are taking action because residents are fed up with the late night noisy racket caused by wealthy drivers in expensive supercars who have turned the Knightsbridge area into their own racetrack and posing pitch.

From last week officers have been given new powers to combat supercars in the Knightsbridge as a result of the council's approval of a Public Spaces Protection Order (PSPO).

This is the first time such an order has been used in this way and means that council officers and the police will be able to take action against anti-social behaviour by drivers.

Anyone found breaching the PSPO will face a fine of between £100 and £1,000 for each offence. These include:

■ Revving engines

■ WARNING: To drivers of high-performance sports cars.

- Repeated sudden or rapid acceleration
- Racing
- Leaving the engine running while parked
- Performing stunts
- Sounding horns
- Playing Music
- Using offensive language and/or intimidating behaviour towards others
- Causing obstruction on a public highway, including driving in convoy

Commenting on the new powers, councillor Tim Ahern, Cabinet Member for Environment, said: "I am sure local residents will welcome the introduction of the PSPO. We know they have suffered for some time with people racing around the streets, accelerating and breaking and congregating on certain streets to show off their cars.

"The new powers mean the Council and police can do more if they catch drivers acting in an antisocial manner.

"We welcome everyone to the Royal Borough and I'm as happy as the next person to see some of these amazing cars. I'd just ask the small number of motorists in the borough who will be affected by the PSPO to show some consideration and not keep our residents up at all hours of the night."

The PSPO is being introduced in response to long standing complaints from residents' that cars and motorbikes have been racing and making noise late into the night and early hours of the morning for years. It follows a consultation carried out by the Council which was sent to about 9,500 people.

A map showing the area covered by the PSPO is available at www.rbkc.gov.uk/pspo

Officers can issue a Fixed Penalty Notice (FPN) of £100 for each offence. If motorists are persistent offenders or if they do not pay outstanding FPN they may be taken to court, which could result in a fine of up to £1,000.

Can Tube provide platform for advertisers and improve Underground's bottom line?

BY GEOFF BAKER

geoff@londonweeklynews.co.uk

THE next train to arrive at platform two will be the Harrods Express on the Amazon line to Elephant & Marmite.

Cash-strapped Transport for London is to open up the Tube for advertising sponsorship in order to raise billions of pounds and prevent a hike in fares.

Trains will be "wrapped" in sponsors' colours and logos as part of a new commercial development plan that aims to raise £3.4 billion over the next ten years.

Underground stations could also be re-named for special promotion periods and branded in the names of popular products.

The imaginative and ambitious plan has been confirmed by TfL, which is reeling in the wake of a £2.8 billion reduction in Government grant funding and other massive costs.

The radical plan, under which Tube trains would be repainted and branded like many taxis, has won the enthusiastic backing of the capital's advertising industry as it would present vast opportunities for companies to promote themselves to the 1.3 billion passengers who use the Underground each year.

"What a gift to Adland, branded Tube Trains. I wish I was still working on Smarties—we could even have different coloured round cushions inside like the sweets," said advertising consultant Billy Mawhinney, former executive creative director with J. Walter Thompson.

"It's never a great experience at the best of times travelling underground, but what a great way of getting revenue and really brightening up the journey to and from work.

"I love the idea of getting the Colgate Toothpaste Tube first thing in the morning. Finally someone could really have some smellyvision and have mint-fresh smelling carriages.

"Like all great advertising opportunities it's a truly wonderful blank canvas. I can't wait to show it to my clients."

A TfL spokeswoman said wrapping Tube trains in advertising logos and slogans was part of the plan that aims to avoid increases in fares by developing new ways of raising non-fare revenue.

"We have already trialled the scheme, which began when the Mexican Embassy wrapped a train during the Rugby World Cup," she said.

Besides branded trains, entire Tube stations could also be renamed for promotions in return for sponsors' cash – Baker Street station could become Quality Street station to advertise the Nestle chocolates.

The sweets giant has already started the advertising ball rolling. In April this year TfL sold the naming rights to Canada Water station, which was rebranded for 24 hours as Buxton Water to tie in with the London Marathon.

The station's roundel signs featured the name of the Nestlé-owned mineral water and there was branded artwork throughout the building and platforms.

However, the publicity stunt was not popular with Underground staff.

A spokesman for the RMT union, which represents Tube workers, said the sponsorship undermined the "public service ethos" of the city's transport network.

"It's part of the whole marketisation and corporatisation

■ CALLING ALL STATIONS:
Could these be new landmark stops on the Underground?

of the transport service when people are struggling to get access to Tube and DLR services because of pressures on them," said the union spokesman, who said that the RMT would resist any attempts to rename stations permanently or to make staff wear uniforms bearing corporate brands.

"We think it's the thin end of a very long wedge. You could have the whole Tube network with branded stations for private gain."

Although TfL is facing clashes with the union over the ad plan, which could see the birth of Swiss Air Cottage, Kentucky Fried Park Corner and a promotion opportunity for the online gifts company, Not On The High Street Kensington, transport chiefs say they are determined to press ahead with their commercial development plan, which has the potential to also raise money through rent rises for its 1,000 in-station retailers and exploiting its vast land portfolio.

"We are looking to raise £1.1 billion from property development," said the TfL spokeswoman.

On New Year's Eve, TfL will pocket £120,000 through a sponsorship deal with the travel search engine Kayak, which will enable Londoners to travel for free on the night.

Game on! World leaders back

BY GEOFF BAKER

geoff@londonweeklynews.co.uk

WEST London's amazing soccer-based Isis-buster Football For Unity has now grown into a team of 1,400 teenage players who'll soon be playing in Downing Street, Vatican City and on the White House lawn as world leaders clamour to join their statesmen-studded supporters' club.

The incredible Make Goals Not War movement – which blocks Islamist internet radicalisation and gang culture by turning at-risk youngsters onto football instead – now has Prime Minister David Cameron, President Obama and Pope Francis cheering on their pioneering squad.

Football For Unity has become London's fastest-growing youth sensation – going from just 10 players in April to 1,400 now. Every week scores of new faces are arriving to join Tuff FC [The Unity of Faiths Foundation Football Club] at their training ground in Southall and now the chief of the Football Association and even England's national team manager are signing up to the new unity spirit of the game too.

The astonishing speed of growth in the movement – which is being driven on social media as teenagers all over the capital enthusiastically pass the word on Football For Unity – has astonished its founders, Kensington-based Dr Shamender Talwar and Anna Prior.

"I have never known or heard of anything like it, everybody now wants to be part of this. The popularity of Football For Unity has touched a pulse and the reaction is amazing, it's wonderful," said Dr Talwar.

"It's working because through football we are making kids of all different faiths feel unified and feel British. Multi-cultural Britain is the real winner here and the kids are feeling that. They are blown away at the worldwide interest in them."

Even though many of them are too poor to afford trainers, let alone kit, teenagers are coming in droves to Tuff FC's after-school practice sessions at the Swift Road Sports Centre in Southall every Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

"We had 70 new kids turn up last week," said Dr Talwar. "Kids are coming from Wandsworth, Camden, Kensington, Tower Hamlets, Stockwell, Brixton, from all over the city – they are hearing about Football For Unity from their mates on social media and they all want to join in. We've got no money for kit and it's expensive to hire the training pitches at £100 an hour, but I can't turn them away."

■ BEAUTIFUL GAME: Youngsters on Westminster Green at the launch of Football for Unity in October.

"You can't say no to a child at risk of radicalisation who is coming to us in hope but who can't even afford a pair of trainers. We're needing to hire 14 pitches now. I don't know how we will fund it but we will find a way."

But hopes are high that the money or sponsorship will now come as world leaders queue up to be part of the Football For Unity movement as it now goes global, scoring at every stage:

GOAL! Last week Dr Talwar and Ms Prior went to 10 Downing Street to meet the Prime Minister's team. They are now arranging a five-a-side game in Downing Street and Dr Talwar asked if David Cameron would like to referee. The PM's special advisers told them Mr Cameron won't ref the match – because he wants to play in it instead.

GOAL! President Obama has invited Football For Unity players to visit him at the White House so that he can roll out the scheme across the USA. If an airline can give Dr Talwar's team free flights, he will take 100 players and will stage a game – with the President – on the White House lawn.

GOAL! Cardinal Vincent Nichols, Archbishop of Westminster and head of the Catholic bishops of England and Wales, is taking Tuff FC players to meet Pope Francis at The Vatican to get his blessing for Football For Unity and to fix a game in St Peter's Square.

GOAL! England manager Roy Hodgson is now supporting Football For Unity along with FA chairman Greg Dyke. Mr Dyke has asked for talks with Dr Talwar in order to get full FA accreditation for Tuff FC and to expand the project.

GOAL! Spanish soccer titans Atletico Madrid are sponsoring Football For Unity and now want to roll out the project to teenagers across Spain.

GOAL! This week Football For Unity is meeting with Sport England, who want to partner the scheme and extend it to local sides all over the country.

GOAL! The President of the European Parliament, Martin Schulz, has called Dr Talwar and Ms Prior to Brussels in order to get Football For Unity games played all across Europe.

GOAL! Soccer icon Diego Maradona has become president of Football For Unity for Latin America. He said, "I am very pleased to be part of this beautiful project, helping the children and creating opportunities for their future."

GOAL! The Mayor of Molenbeek, the Belgian town revealed to be at the heart of the jihadist threat after the Paris terror attacks, has asked Tuff FC to play a game against the town's team as an inspirational example of how football can steer teenagers away from radicalisation.

GOAL! Tuff FC won the Sports Initiative of the Year prize at the recent prestigious Pride Of Britain awards.

"Something that started small in West London is now growing into something very big worldwide," said Dr Talwar.

"Football For Unity has been established to promote unity amongst young people around the world through the beautiful game of football. It provides a platform for cultural exchange, promotes health and wellbeing, and nurtures aspiring young footballers."

football's campaign for unity

■ SIGN OF THE TIMES: This was the moment when football legend Diego Maradona signed for Kensington-based Football For Unity by officially agreeing to be president of the charity in Latin America. Football For Unity, launched at the House of Commons in October, is part of the Unity of Faiths organisation, set up by Kensington social psychologist Dr Shamender Talwar and former Mayfair antiques dealer Anna Prior, which has won worldwide acclaim for its initiatives in eliminating radicalism. Maradona, 55, said at the event: "I am very pleased to be part of this beautiful project with Football for Unity, helping the children and creating opportunities for their future."

WHEN football legend Diego Maradona signed for Kensington-based Football For Unity in the autumn – by officially agreeing to be president of the charity in Latin America – the worldwide impact of the fledgling initiative suddenly became apparent.

Football For Unity is part of the Unity of Faiths organisation, set up by Kensington social psychologist Dr Shamender Talwar and former Mayfair antiques dealer Anna Prior. It has rapidly won worldwide acclaim for its fresh approach to eliminating radicalism.

The relationship between Maradona and Football For Unity (FFU) blossomed after he sent a video link message of support during the House of Commons event expressing his excitement at the prospect of working with children via FFU.

Back in October, founders and trustees of FFU with their legal team, Mr Sarosh Zaiwalla and Mr Lawrence Jacobson of Zaiwalla & Co. LLP, gathered to welcome Maradona and his legal team led by Matias Morla at London's Intercontinental hotel during a press conference. And London Weekly News reporter Jack Dixon was there to see history being made.

Maradona told the London Weekly News: "I am very pleased to be part of this beautiful project with Football for Unity, helping the children and creating opportunities for their future."

The legendary Argentinian footballer and World Cup winner has served as a manager and coach at a number of clubs as well as the national team of Argentina. Many experts, football critics, former players, current players and football fans regard him as the greatest football player of all time.

Marcus Faraji trustee co-founder of FFU and Mariano Menéndez President of Forbes LATM, said: "Football For Unity are extremely excited and pleased to have Maradona on board as he is a truly world class representative of football."

The FFU projects will be set up worldwide, scaling up from successful existing initiatives in the UK and Spain, to provide structured games, training, facilities and health awareness education.

This will be targeted to groups of young people from diverse local communities who will benefit from improved integration through sport. Alongside this, sessions on nutrition, behaviour, conflict resolution and equality will engage youth and teach them to lead better lifestyles.

Dr Shamender Talwar and Anna Prior, co-founders of Football For Unity, said at the time: "We are so proud to say that the world's greatest ever footballer has signed for us, a British charity helping and supporting many youths around Britain and worldwide through the beautiful game of Football."

Among the high-profile figureheads to endorse the scheme in October was the Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn who was mobbed as he stepped onto Westminster's Speaker's Green.

Mr Corbyn said: "I think it's a brilliant initiative and it's nice that we've got it here in Parliament on this small area of green outside the Speaker's House and we've got representatives from Atletico Madrid talking to us about football coaching and football opportunities."

Asked if the initiative could transform lives, Mr Corbyn added: "I'm absolutely sure of it because young people from all backgrounds need to be together as well as having their own identity and that's really what modern Britain and modern London is about."

At the launch, Virendra Sharma, MP for Southall, commented: "A lack of education and ignorance creates barriers. Many are burdened with prejudices against black, Asian or white people; against Muslims, Hindus, Jews or Christians; against the poor or the rich; the slow or the clever; the skinny or the obese; the disabled, the homeless, the jobless. Hatred of anyone who is different has no place in our new global community. Knowledge is key to tackling hatred and education is at the heart of Football for Unity."

"Our very special thanks go to the children who have made history through the launch by coming together in the House of Commons and showing unity. This represents a closer step to a better understanding of tolerance and peace."

Award proves we're best in Europe for volunteering

BY GEOFF BAKER

geoff@londonweeklynews.co.uk

HAVE-A-GO Londoners have won the capital the crown as the best city in Europe for volunteering, beating 10 other cities to become the best example of a big society.

London scooped the European Volunteering Capital 2016 award in recognition of the innovative programmes that Mayor Boris Johnson has developed as a legacy of London 2012, when volunteering took centre stage at the Olympic and Paralympic Games.

Since then, the mayor's volunteering initiative Team London has mobilised over 120,000 active volunteers, including 60,000 school children and young people.

Team London led the successful bid with support from local volunteer centres and Greater London Volunteering. The accolade is awarded by the European Volunteer Centre, a network of agencies which promotes volunteering across Europe.

Mr Johnson, said: "I'm very proud that London has been recognised as the top volunteering city in Europe. Tens of thousands of Londoners are now giving a hand to others and helping to make London a cleaner, greener and more welcoming place for everyone. Team London has created an incredible volunteering legacy for the capital, with people of all ages and backgrounds giving up their time to make the city an even better place to live in."

The other candidate cities for this year's title were Belfast, Bruges, Cagliari, Cascais, Edinburgh, Lucca, Perm, Rome, Varese and Viterbo.

London's achievements that were recognised by the expert judging panel include:

- Mobilising over 120,000 active volunteers including over 60,000

schoolchildren and young people

- Delivering the UK's first speed volunteering app

- Supporting nearly 1,600 charities and offering grants of over £3 million to date

- Signing up over 100 businesses to offer employer-supported volunteering through the Mayor's Corporate Commitment. Some 65 per cent of employees now say that they would be more likely to work for an employer that encourages volunteering.

- Offering innovative recognition for volunteering through a guaranteed interview scheme for young volunteers seeking paid work experience or full-time jobs.

The mayor's senior adviser Veronica Wadley, said: "This is not only an extraordinary legacy of 2012, but it also shows that with will, every leading city can deliver the big society. More and more people are now taking social action in their local area and increasing numbers of businesses understand the value of volunteering as a route in to work. Some 70 per cent of our young volunteers are assessed as work-ready compared to just 20 per cent of the normal pool of job candidates.

"With continuing problems of youth unemployment, we've demonstrated that volunteering gives people the skills they need to compete in the job market and this model could be adopted by any city in the world. Team London looks forward to capitalising on this honour by working even more closely with the voluntary sector and businesses to drive greater impact for London's communities."

Director of the European Volunteer Centre, Gabriella Civico said: "London is an outstanding example of how local government, local people and businesses can strategically harness the benefits of volunteering to improve people's lives, the environment and contribute to socially cohesive communities."

Milestone for new police HQ

THE new headquarters of the Metropolitan Police was officially 'topped out' earlier this month by the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, Sir Bernard Hogan-Howe, and the Deputy Mayor for Policing and Crime, Stephen Greenhalgh.

In the heart of Westminster and close to the Met's founding location, the Curtis Green building is undergoing a refit and security upgrade and will become the new HQ at the end of next year.

The move is part of the Mayor of London Boris Johnson's drive to put bobbies first by selling off under-utilised police buildings and redirecting funds into frontline police services.

As part of the biggest programme of transformation in the Met's history, the sale of the outdated New Scotland Yard, now to be known as 10 Broadway, for £370million will help modernise and streamline London's police service, saving money, keeping officer numbers high and equipping them with the latest technology to enable them to be more effective, more mobile and more accountable. The relocation to the slimmed down new premises on the Victoria Embankment will save an additional £6million a year in running costs.

Since 2012, the mayor's programme has helped to cut costs across the Met by £391million. The Curtis Green building has been empty since late 2011.

■ FROM GRASSI WITH LOVE: Bond Girls as you've never seen them before are on exhibition at the Ransom Gallery until Christmas Eve. The Pimlico Road gallery has landed the UK exclusive of the latest 007 works by famous Italian painter Marco Grassi, highly-collected by young bankers. 'Grassi has painted nine Bond girls in an edgy contemporary style, realism plus a layer of fantasy, repeating his favourite neon colours of hot pink, turquoise and acid green,' said a spokesman. 'As in Goldfinger, he uses real gold, the gold leaf which is a current feature of his celebrated work, inspired by the Russian icons of Moscow and St Petersburg.' Grassi has had solo and group exhibitions all over the world. Recent shows in Miami, New York City, Moscow, Milan, Bologna, Perth Australia, Montreal, Los Angeles, Aspen, Positano. The spokesman added: 'His paintings attract a young affluent public, for their glamour and extraordinary technical ability. They are all different, but alike with tousled hair, full lips, and a powerful confident stare.' Pictured above is Barbara Bach in The Spy Who Loved Me (1977) and below is Britt Ekland in The Man With The Golden Gun (1974).

Carol service raises £13,000

WITH the generous support of residents, local businesses, celebrity readers and pupils from a local school, Royal Borough Mayor, Councillor Robert Freeman, raised nearly £13,000 for his mayoral charity at a carol service held at Our Lady of Victories Church in Kensington earlier this month.

The Mayor's charity is supporting lung cancer research at Royal Marsden and The Royal Brompton hospitals.

The packed congregation heard poetry, prose and readings from the Bible given by Lady Ella Windsor, Penny Junor, Cerys Matthews, Andrew Pierce, Melanie McDonagh and Liz Arnold. Soprano Marie Macklin delighted the audience with a solo piece, accompanied on the piano by her husband, Timothy Teague (who also played the organ for the evening). The church was filled with song from Cardinal Vaughan Memorial School's VI Form choir, which earned rapturous applause at the end of the service.

The evening was rounded-off with mince pies donated by the Ivy Restaurant, which is soon to open a brasserie on Kensington High Street.

Guests at the service heard the medical directors of the Royal Marsden, Professor Martin Gore, and The Royal Brompton, Professor Tim Evans, speak of the advances in understanding lung cancer and finding ways to treat it.

Professor Gore said: "The door to finding new treatments is ajar and now is the time to push it open. That is why the financial support given by the Mayor's Charity has the power to make such a difference."

Councillor Freeman, said: "I am hugely indebted to all those who gave their support to my charity this evening."

"Monsignor James Curry, my chaplain, made his church available to us and gave us the warmest of welcomes. The readers and musicians gave their time so willingly and the guests responded with great generosity for my charity. It was such a lovely occasion and has done much to help research into lung cancer."

Red, white and blue... it's Santa

FATHER Christmas and his reindeer will visit Stamford Bridge next week as the football ground kicks off its season's celebrations with a Festive Family Fun Day that's free for everyone to attend.

For one day only, on Tuesday, December 22, the Fulham Road home of Chelsea Football Club will be transformed into a mini festive winter wonderland, inviting visitors to count down the final days before Christmas in a fun-filled day of food, drinks, craft stalls and activities for all the family to enjoy.

The day will feature a host of special guests, including everyone's favourite, Father Christmas, who along with his reindeer will join a group of real penguins in a fantasy festive grotto with log cabin and flickering lights. The children can let their imaginations run wild before whispering their Christmas wishes in Santa's ear, only having to wait three days to see if they come true.

Simon Hunter, head of venue and brand at Stamford Bridge, said: "Our venue is at the heart of the Fulham and Chelsea community and with so many residents on our doorstep, we're looking forward to welcoming as many as possible to Stamford Bridge for a day of pure fun and good old-fashioned festive entertainment."

■ The Festive Family Fun Day at Stamford Bridge takes place on Tuesday, December 22 from 11am to 4pm. Entry is free.

NEWS FROM KENSINGTON

LWN

■ CHALLENGES: The Westway Trust says it will address 'diversity shortfalls' on its management board.

UNDER THE WESTWAY

Trust will tackle its diversity shortfalls

Westway Trust Chief Executive Angela McConville discusses the importance of diversity to the success of any organisation and explains how the Trust will address its own diversity shortfalls

OVER the last few weeks Westway Trust has been putting in place measures that will begin to address the urgent gaps in diversity on our board. The board is not adequately representative of the local community and so far we've not moved quickly enough to fix that.

While ethnic diversity is the most urgent and obvious area we need to address, we are also working to ensure that we are representative in terms of age, gender, sexuality, disability, religion, socio-economics and every other aspect of the local community as well.

To discharge our stewardship responsibilities for the estate and to facilitate the best use of the spaces for a community as diverse as North Kensington, now and in the future, we need a broad mix of skills and experience.

A lack of diversity and inclusion is not exclusive to Westway Trust. It is a problem in many charities, and most big companies, but those who have addressed it have felt the benefits. Not only are they better able to represent their community, to call on a wider pool of talent and to get a broader range of ideas but it demonstrably improves their performance.

Companies who have women on their boards perform better than those who don't; a diverse workforce reduces staff turnover meaning the best employees don't move elsewhere; and companies with high levels of diversity say they are more innovative and creative.

Currently at Westway Trust we have two vacancies on our Board. This presents us with a terrific opportunity to make quick progress in improving the diversity of our trustees. Our board is made up of three trustees elected by our 50-strong membership of local organisations; three trustees are nominated by the local council, giving us a link to local democracy; and up to six trustees are openly recruited based on their skills, expertise and community insight.

One of our current vacancies will be nominated and elected by our Members and we have told them that we would particularly welcome the nomination of black and minority ethnic candidates. The other place is an open, independent one, and after listening to what people have said to us at recent meetings and to the strong feelings among particular groups we have decided to limit the candidates in this round of recruitment to those nominated by our Member organisations and the Westway 23 group.

A diverse trustee board won't mean we can pat ourselves on the back and stop listening. It's also not enough to assume that because we're open to partnership with every part of the community that we've done enough to reach everyone who would like to get involved. We are currently at the early stages of a comprehensive review of our equality and diversity policies, and will be getting expert external benchmarking and creating an action plan that covers not only staff recruitment but every aspect of our work and communications.

I know every one of the trustees that sits on Westway Trust's board cares deeply about the value of the space to the community and gives their time for free to make sure it is managed properly but good intentions are not good enough and to work in partnership with the community we need to be representative of it.

It will take time to make the changes that need to be made and along the way there will be mistakes but it is something we are committed to and it will mean the space under the Westway better serves those around it.

Time running out to have a say on ambitious Crossrail 2 plans

LWN REPORTER
editorial@londonweeklynews.co.uk

TRANSPORT chiefs are encouraging the public to have their say on controversial proposals for Crossrail 2 as the consultation on the new railway for London and the South East enters its final month.

Launched by Transport for London and Network Rail in October, the latest public consultation on the proposed new railway closes on Friday, January 8. It has already attracted thousands of responses, with many people attending the public consultation local drop-in events all along the route from Surrey to Hertfordshire, with over 70 events organised.

The consultation provides the latest plans reflecting comments from earlier consultations. It includes proposals for:

- Station locations, entrances and exits for the tunnelled section of the route
- Locations of ventilation shafts for the tunnelled section
- Construction sites required to build the scheme; and
- Service patterns and changes to existing National Rail services.

Crossrail 2 will connect National Rail networks in Surrey and Hertfordshire with an underground tunnelled section crossing beneath central London between Wimbledon and Tottenham Hale and New Southgate.

Its supporters say it will enable 270,000 more people to enter central London every morning at peak time, helping relieve the increasing pressure on London's transport network. The railway is also predicted to drive the development of 200,000 homes and 200,000 new jobs.

The project has gathered pace significantly over the autumn. As part of the Government's Spending Review, the Chancellor George Osborne has confirmed a new £300 million Transport Development Fund for the next generation of transport infrastructure projects including Crossrail 2, which is being considered by the newly created National Infrastructure Commission. This is expected to report in spring 2016.

Responses from the public consultation will help shape the proposals for the scheme. Subject to further development and consultation, TfL and Network Rail will then seek powers for permission to build and operate Crossrail 2. With Government funding and approval, construction could begin in 2020 with the first Crossrail 2 service running in 2030.

TfL and Network Rail have held an extensive series of drop-in events along the proposed route throughout November and early this month, with staff on hand to explain our proposals and answer questions. Thousands of people have already attended these events, with many still scheduled across London until tomorrow, December 18. More information on these events can be found on the Crossrail 2 website.

Mayor of London, Boris Johnson MP, said: "Crossrail 2 will be a transformative new transport link that will significantly improve capacity on the rail network into and out of London, thereby boosting jobs, new homes and economic growth in the capital and far beyond.

"Crossrail 2 is a major infrastructure project and so it's vital that we get it right from the start. This consultation is key to helping us to shape the proposals and to ensure that everyone with a view on Crossrail 2 can have their say and is listened to. We know that there's massive support for Crossrail 2 but we need to get the scheme right to ensure that there is real momentum behind our efforts to get it delivered."

Michèle Dix, TfL's managing director for Crossrail 2, said: "Crossrail 2 is a vital new railway to meet the growing demands of the rapidly growing population of London and the South East, and help support thousands of new homes and jobs across the region, whilst boosting the UK economy.

"Receiving and listening to the public's feedback on our latest proposals is an important part of our plans to develop Crossrail 2. It's been helpful to understand people's concerns as well as receive their support. We have really appreciated that so many people have come to the drop-in events. We have already had a large number of responses to the consultation and I would encourage others to read about our proposals and give us their views before the consultation closes in January."

Chris Curtis, Network Rail's head of Crossrail 2, said: "Crossrail 2 would deliver vital extra capacity to the national rail network and provide new and improved regional connections across London and beyond.

"This consultation is a great opportunity for rail passengers to have their say on what Crossrail 2 would mean for the proposed train services in north east London, Hertfordshire and Cambridgeshire, south west London, Surrey and Hampshire. I'd urge anyone who wants to see a better rail service for their area to get involved over the next few weeks."

The public can give their views on any aspect of the proposals at www.crossrail2.co.uk until Friday, January 8. Factsheets, maps and further information on the scheme can also be found online. A consultation report on the responses received will be published in spring 2016.

Warning over fake presents

POLICE and Westminster City Council are warning shoppers to beware that the Christmas presents they buy in central London could turn out to be dodgy fakes.

The alert comes after more than £500,000 worth of counterfeit goods – including teddy bears, football shirts and illegal condoms – were seized in a pre-Christmas raid.

The crackdown followed complaints from shoppers that they had been conned by "souvenir shops" and it targeted 10 stores in and around the Trocadero Centre in Piccadilly Circus.

Among the haul recovered from traders were fake clothing, condoms emblazoned with an offensive slogan and unlicensed Hello Kitty toys.

The raids, carried out by Westminster City Council, Trading Standards, police and UK border agency staff, came after shoppers and tourists repeatedly complained about the price and legitimacy of goods sold in souvenir shops.

A council spokesman said: "We will not stand by and allow traders to flog fake goods, which rip off both honest retailers and the public.

"Our operation with the Met police and partners shows that Westminster's Trading Standards team is serious about tackling this problem in the heart of London. Rogue traders should beware; we will seize your fake goods."

Large quantities of business documents were also seized during the raids – which was dubbed Operation Canton by officials – and one person suspected of being an illegal immigrant was arrested by the UK Border Agency officers.

Sergeant Paul Clooney, from Westminster police, said: "Counterfeiting is often thought of as a victimless crime but it can have devastating effects on local traders who are trying to legitimately sell goods. Customers end up buying items which are often of a poor and sometimes dangerous standard.

"This operation should deter others who think the West End is an easy place to sell counterfeit goods. We will continue to work with partners to target such individuals."

Taxis carry road congestion alerts

TAXI-TOP digital advertising boards are to display traffic information in an innovative trial aimed at cutting congestion in London.

Transport for London have been trialling the technology since December 7 with BrightMove Media to enable the capital's iconic taxis to encourage other road users to avoid congested routes.

Initially, targeted messages will inform road users of traffic levels at 40 to 50 areas where there are known traffic delays. In the future, the technology could be used to provide real-time updates on incidents across London's road network. Messages will be displayed on around 200 taxis fitted with the electronic boards using GPS technology to ensure that the information is accurate and up to date.

The trial is the latest in a range of initiatives TfL says it is undertaking to keep traffic moving in London.

Fight to stop Chelsea station

■ The No Crossrail In Chelsea group – which recently added rock star Mark Knopfler to its 6,000 supporters – is preparing to field its own candidates against at least 12 current Conservative members of Kensington and Chelsea Royal Borough Council.

■ Kensington and Chelsea Council is backing the eight-year construction of a Crossrail Chelsea station, during which the King's Road would be closed for five years.

■ The historic Chelsea Society voted in overwhelming numbers at its AGM to withdraw its support for a Chelsea Crossrail station.

■ Pasta-sauce magnate Loyd

Grossman opposes the Crossrail plans for Chelsea. He says: "The construction of a huge Crossrail Station in Chelsea threatens to significantly damage the distinctiveness, scale and intimacy of the King's Road. Local people and businesses do not wish £1 billion to be squandered on a scheme which will threaten the historic environment of the King's Road, which is a valuable social, cultural and economic asset not only for those who live nearby, but for all Londoners."

■ Actresses Felicity Kendal and Cheri Lunghi also oppose the Chelsea station proposals.

Community says welcome, Wilko!

ONE of Britain's best loved value home and garden retailers, Wilko, has opened the doors to its newest central London store on Kensington High Street.

As part of an expansion plan into the south of England, the new store – which has created 62 jobs – will be the family business's 381st store in the UK and its sixth in central London.

The 5,833 sq ft shop stocks homeware and furniture, DIY and decorating, health and beauty and garden and outdoor goods.

To mark the occasion on Tuesday, December 8, the Chelsea Pensioners led a ribbon cutting, along with branch manager Harlen Holding and assistant branch manager Barry Chapman.

The Royal Hospital Chelsea, home of the Chelsea Pensioners, a national charity, received a £1,000 donation to its Royal Hospital Chelsea Appeal.

The hospital's corporate partnerships officer, Rachael Ferguson, said: "This donation will help safeguard the home of the Chelsea Pensioners. It is a pleasure to have received such a generous donation from Wilko and we warmly welcome them as part of the Kensington and Chelsea community and look forward to helping them celebrate future successes."

To spread a little festive cheer and help shoppers stock up on garden and home essentials, the first 100 lucky customers through the door received a £5 Wilko gift card in a bag jam-packed full of goodies.

There was entertainment on the day, including festive music from the Brass Santas, while a face painter kept the little ones occupied the following Saturday.

As well as this, Wilko warmed commuters outside High Street Kensington tube station with cups of hot chocolate and mince pies.

Wilko is supporting the St Mungo's homeless charity and, to kick off the partnership, Liza Boon from the charity picked up £250 worth of products from the store to help kit out their shelters.

Mr Holding said: "We're absolutely delighted to have made this move into such a high-profile shopping destination.

"We can't wait to introduce Kensington to our range of great value, great quality products for the whole family to enjoy. The team have worked really hard to get everything in place ahead of the launch, and it's been a pleasure to welcome shoppers into store and to begin long-standing relationships with the local community."

■ SURPRISES IN STORE: The Wilko team outside the popular community retailer's new store in Kensington High Street on their grand opening day earlier this month. Right: entertainment is provided for shoppers by the colourful Brass Santas.

■ SOUNDS OF SANTA: Festive tunes are provided by the Brass Santas outside the new Wilko store.

Singers support Syrian refugee funding appeal

POPULAR Earls Court-based community choir, the Kensington Singers, announced last week that its annual Christmas concert will raise funds for the Save the Children's Syrian Refugees appeal.

Joining the adult choir for the date earlier this week were the Fulham Children's Choir.

All profits from the concert at the historic St Dionis Church in Parsons Green will go towards the work of the organisation.

Taking place on Monday, December 15, the concert, named Home for Christmas, featured Christmas favourites alongside melodies the organisers said would help to keep the wintery weather at bay.

There was music for everyone, including jazz takes on Carol of the Bells, We Wish You a Merry Christmas, Stopford's A Christmas Blessing, Adam Lay Ybounden and of course, the wartime song I'll Be Home for Christmas.

■ TOP OF THEIR VOICES: The Kensington Singers.

Kensington Singers is a 60-strong non-auditioned choir formed by 2015 BBC Unsung Hero Hannah Brine. In January it celebrates its fifth birthday.

The choir rehearses on Monday evenings at St Philips Church, Earls Court, and has performed in many local venues, entertaining appreciative audiences.

On December 6 the Kensington Singers sang at Duke of York Square, Chelsea, raising funds for Glass Door Homeless charity. The choir thanks everyone who came and supported them for a fun afternoon.

Downton is dead, long live Victoria!

BY GEOFF BAKER

geoff@londonweeklynews.co.uk

QUEEN Victoria is to become the latest TV sensation as a drama saga set in the early years of her reign is being deliberately-crafted to become the new Downton Abbey.

ITV chiefs believe that Victoria will pick up all of Downton's fanatical following worldwide and after the initial eight-part series starts screening in 2016 the period drama could easily run and run for years.

The royal saga, created by acclaimed novelist Daisy Goodwin, will star the former Doctor Who sidekick Jenna Coleman as the young queen and it will share all of the hallmarks of Downton – lavish sets, romantic twists, shocking tragedies and life both above stairs and below in the servants' quarters.

Pundits believe that Victoria, which will be screened in Downton's Sunday night slot, will be such another huge hit with viewers that it will start the birth of "the Victoria Effect", a rush on the fashions, jewellery, furniture and all things early Victorian in the same way that Downton caused a craze for everything post-Edwardian.

But the drama is poised to be even far more fabulous than the life of the aristocratic Crawley family, as instead of being set on a fictional Yorkshire country estate, Victoria will be set in Kensington Palace and Buckingham Palace.

The first eight episodes will cover just three years – from Victoria's ascension to the throne at the age of 18 in 1837 through to her courtship of Prince Albert and their mar-

Harry supports hospital's work

PRINCE Harry was the special guest on Monday this week at a leading London HIV hospital that was supported by his mother Princess Diana.

The prince toured Mildmay hospital to mark its 150th anniversary.

The East London hospital has been at the forefront of specialist HIV care since 1988, when it became the first dedicated hospice for people dying of Aids related illnesses.

Harry was introduced to staff and patients who are living with the disease to discover how the work of medics there has changed over the last two decades.

His visit also marked the official opening of some purpose-built facilities at its new complex.

Staff and patients moved into the premises – which feature a 26-bed inpatient unit and day care services – last September.

Princess Diana – who was the first member of the Royal Family to have contact with Aids victims in a concerted effort to overcome worldwide misconceptions of the disease – regularly visited the hospital in the 1980s.

She toured Mildmay both officially and privately, attempting to highlight the devastating illness and combat the stigma associated with it.

The hospital's director, Dr Ross White, told the Daily Express: "Prince Harry's visit is special because the Princess of Wales, his mother, showed great support for the Mildmay."

"We hope it helps raise HIV awareness and increase knowledge of our work."

ROYAL LONDON

'Her court is perfect setting for an epic drama'

Victoria's reign set to be storyline for TV's new royal saga have hoped to have felt before! He clasped me in his arms, & we kissed each other again & again! His beauty, his sweetness & gentleness – really how can I ever be thankful enough to have such a Husband! To be called by names of tenderness, I have never yet heard used to me before – was bliss beyond belief! Oh! This was the happiest day of my life!"

With such an intense love at the core of the storyline, it is no surprise that ITV chiefs are already anticipating a massive hit with the new royal drama.

"Queen Victoria's court is the perfect setting for an epic drama – a seething hotbed of scandal, corruption and romantic intrigue, involving everyone from the humblest dresser to the Mistress of the Robes, the lowliest bootboy to the Lord Chamberlain," said Mammoth Screen's managing director Damien Timmer. "When we join Victoria in 1837, England is unrecognisable from the country it will become by the end of her reign. As she takes her fledgling steps as monarch we slowly see modern Britain emerge."

Daisy Goodwin added: "I've been fascinated by Victoria since I started reading her diaries at university. She's a woman whose personality leaps off the page – a tiny four foot 11 teenager who overnight became the most powerful woman in the world, and her candour and spirit makes for an irresistible heroine."

"Victoria was the first woman to have it all; she had a passionate marriage, nine children and was grandmother to most of Europe's royalty, but she also had a job, being Queen of the most important nation in the world. It wasn't easy; her reign was beset by scandal and sleaze and it was only by sheer force of personality that she prevailed."

As with the cast of Downton Abbey, ITV has assembled an impressive cast to carry the epic drama, which is already being pre-sold to TV companies around the world. Joining Jenna Coleman as Victoria and Rufus Sewell as Lord Melbourne, will be Paul Rhys (The Assets, Borgia, Being Human) as Sir John Conroy, Peter Firth (Spooks, Undeniable, World Without End) as the Queen's conniving uncle the Duke of Cumberland and Catherine Flemming (Simone's Labyrinth, No Place to Go) as Queen Victoria's mother.

Eve Myles (Broadchurch, Torchwood, You) plays Mrs Jenkins, the Queen's senior dresser and Adrian Schiller (Suffragette, Endeavour) is Penge, the Household Steward. Nichola McAuliffe (Agatha Raisin: The Quiche of Death, Coronation Street) is the ruthless Duchess of Cumberland, Daniela Holtz (Phoenix, Der Verdacht) is Victoria's governess Baroness Lehzen, and Nell Hudson (Outlander, Call the Midwife) plays "a mysterious new member of the household", Miss Skerrett. Tommy-Lawrence Knight (The Sarah Jane Adventures) also joins the royal household as the hall boy, Brodie.

Nigel Lindsay (You, Me and the Apocalypse, The Tunnel) is Sir Robert Peel, the leader of the Tory party and Alice Orr-Ewing (The Theory of Everything, Framfance) is Lady Flora Hastings, lady-in-waiting to the Duchess of Kent.

Victoria will start on ITV next year.

riage in 1840. But if the series – now being filmed by Mammoth Screen, the makers of the hugely-popular Poldark – is the hit that it is widely-tipped to become, Victoria could "do a Downton" and stretch for an additional five or six series following the queen through 60 more years of her remarkable reign.

Although much of modern culture portrays Queen Victoria as a mourning widow forever in black and hidden away from public life, her early years on the throne were filled with family strife, political plotting and a passionate love story which all provide a goldmine of storylines for a dramatist.

When Victoria inherited the throne as a teenager, it followed a sad and restricted childhood controlled by her dominating mother, the Duchess of Kent, and her crony and alleged lover, Sir John Conroy.

Conroy, who managed the duchess's household and aspired to rule by influencing Victoria, created a strict and stifling system for the young princess under which she was drilled into learning five languages and prevented from mixing with other children.

Her only playmates were her dolls, she was forced to share a bedroom with her mother and her every action was closely monitored and recorded in a deliberate bid to make her weak and dependent on the cabal of Conroy, her mother and her lady-in-waiting Lady Flora Hastings, and her governesses, Baroness Lehzen and the Duchess of Northumberland.

But the plotting to control Victoria underestimated her spirit and it backfired, and when she became queen she banned

Conroy from her presence and after her marriage she evicted her mother from the palace.

The TV series will dramatise all of the heartache and hell of Victoria's early years as queen, including how she suffered from Press attacks and public jeering after smear campaigns were orchestrated against her by Conroy and her other enemies, who attempted to undermine the young queen by encouraging false rumours linking her salaciously with Prime Minister Lord Melbourne, a father figure and Victoria's honest and trusted adviser.

But Victoria will also hook viewers with the romance of her deep love for Prince Albert, for whom she instantly fell after rejecting a series of princes paraded for her by various European royals with vested interests.

Victoria and Albert's romance is one of the great royal love stories. After their first meeting, she wrote to his uncle, King Leopold of Belgium, to thank him "for the prospect of great happiness you have contributed to give me, in the person of dear Albert. He possesses every quality that could be desired to render me perfectly happy. He is so sensible, so kind, and so good, and so amiable too. He has besides the most pleasing and delightful exterior and appearance you can possibly see."

Five days after they met again at Windsor in 1839, Victoria proposed to him and four months later they were married. On their wedding night, she wrote in her diary, "I NEVER, NEVER spent such an evening!!! MY DEAREST DEAREST DEAR Albert, his excessive love & affection gave me feelings of heavenly love & happiness I never could

How Duke upset hotel the royals love to use

BY GEOFF BAKER
geoff@londonweeklynews.co.uk

MAJOR General Gerald Cavendish Grosvenor, 6th Duke of Westminster KG CB CVO OBE TD DL, and possessor of a fortune said to exceed £9 billion, is not in the good books of the Royal Family's favourite hotel retreat.

Ever since Christopher Robin, millions of visitors come down to town to look for The Queen and, like AA Milne's little lad and his guardian Alice, they just can't find her anywhere.

That's because they are looking in the wrong place. As those in the know have long known, there's no point in traipsing around Harrods hoping to bump into Her Majesty in the food hall, nor can you expect to have much luck searching for a Wales or two in any of the city's garden centres.

But if you were to go to The Goring....

London's last family-owned luxury hotel in Beeston Place has long been the secret "our place" of the Royal Family. Since the wonderfully English and exceptionally elegant hotel opened 115 years ago it has been the preferred venue for sovereigns and those in line to the throne.

Whilst other more famous hotels are the frequently-publicised haunts of the loud new money of pop stars, sheikhs and East European oligarchs, the discreet and Michelin-starred Goring with its Bollinger house champagne, Asprey products in the bathroom and Gainsborough silks on the walls is the favourite of the first family.

The Goring was filled with royals and the very best of guests for the coronations of George VI and The Queen, it was the chosen retreat of the Duchess of Cambridge before her marriage, the late Queen Mother very much adored the hotel - where she would regularly dine on the house speciality of Eggs Drumkilbo [eggs and lobster] and Her Majesty herself is known to take tea there.

Not for nothing is The Goring the only hotel in London proudly bear the royal warrant for hospitality services and with suites costing up to £8,500 a night it is, as one might expect, rather very special.

What one might not expect, however, is to check into the royal suite at London's most select hotel only to be overlooked by gawkers from a low-cost block of flats.

Yet that is the problem now facing The Goring as The Duke of Westminster's Grosvenor

■ ROYAL APPOINTMENT: The Goring Hotel is at odds with the Duke of Westminster.

Estate is aiming to expand its massive property empire by building 23 affordable housing flats above shops in neighbouring Buckingham Palace Road.

Understandably, The Goring and residents of other properties facing the proposed flats have "grave concerns" about the development, which the hotel says could present "a real threat to our livelihood" and although Westminster City Council is tipped to give the nod to the planning application, robust appeals on the grounds of preserving privacy are expected.

Stampede to claim tickets for Queen's 90th birthday party

AS predicted, a Glastonbury-style rush met the recent release of 25,000 tickets for The Queen's 90th birthday celebration, causing all of the £55 to £195 seats to sell out in just three hours - but there's still a chance to be at the event of the year.

Taking place from May 12-15 in Home Park at Windsor Castle, The Queen's 90th birthday party will celebrate Her Majesty's life, her dedication to the Commonwealth and international affairs, her involvement with the Navy, Army and Air Force, and principally her love of horses.

On each evening, 900 horses and more than 1,500 performers from around the world will participate in the birthday salute to The Queen.

The 90-minute show will take the audience from her birth, through the Second World War, her marriage, her coronation and a reign of more than 60 years, and will incorporate leading actors, bands and dancers to tell the story.

Members of the Royal Family will attend each show and The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will be the guests of honour on the last night.

Although a ticket to the royal theatrical spectacular is now harder to find than a parking space in Soho, organisers have confirmed that there will be a free ballot in the New Year for 5,000 tickets to a pre-performance party on May 15. The party will take place on Windsor's Long Walk, and winners will get to see red-carpet arrivals as well as view the performance on giant screens.

Huge demand is also expected for this pre-show party and thousands who are not successful in the ballot will be disappointed. But royal fans keen to have some special souvenir of the evenings will be pleased by the news that publishers St James's House has been appointed to produce the event's official commemorative book, the only publication sanctioned and endorsed by the organisers.

"As the official publisher, we've been entrusted with telling The Queen's story," said the publishing house's chief executive Richard Freed. "Over the four evenings, more than 25,000 VIPs, guests and spectators will attend the event, and the commemorative album will enable The Queen's 90th birthday celebration to reach an even wider audience."

The big birthday bash will be screened live on the last night on ITV.

Present crisis

NOW that his father has revealed that Prince George will be "bouncing around like a rabbit" with excitement on Christmas Eve, Kensington Palace is braced for an avalanche of toy bunnies from well-wishers.

But gift-givers are reminded of the Duke and Duchess's plea to the public not to send presents for their children.

Although they appreciate the thought, the Duke and Duchess would prefer that those keen to give a Christmas present give it instead to any of the children's charities of the capital, which is where most gifts to the young prince are passed on to anyway.

'The core of Jane Austen's story remains true... but now it's just got zombies too'

■ GORE BLIMEY:
The film Pride and Prejudice and Zombies will star Lily James.

by Geoff Baker

MOST of the many screen adaptations of Pride And Prejudice have tended to skip the bit when Lizzie Bennet stamps on a zombie's head.

From Greer Garson's interpretation in the 1940 film version through to Keira Knightley's Oscar-nominated performance of 2005, perhaps many an audience has come away wishing if only Miss Bennet had high-kicked the walking dead.

But now Downton Abbey's Lady Rose MacClare is to put right what has been clearly missing for all of these years in the New Year release of a version of the Jane Austen classic which is predicted to become the most-successful ever, finally proving it is a truth universally acknowledged that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a ninja.

Pride And Prejudice And Zombies, starring Downton's Lily James as Elizabeth Bennet-meets-Lara Croft is surely set to be massive fun. Combining period costume drama and action comedy horror, two of the most popular movie genres of recent years, the film deserves to win her the Academy Award for best actress with her tongue in her cheek.

Like La Knightley's sumptuous epic, this new take on the 202-year-old story looks glorious, set in the arcadian grounds of a large Regency manor house with all the lavish splendour of the period; candle-lit dinners, wonderful frocks and gracious manners. It is beautifully lit and filmed and up until this point the Austen purists will be very happy with it.

"We stay really faithful to the story," says Lily, the new screen sensation who starred in Disney's Cinderella this year. "The characters and the core of Jane Austen's story remains absolutely true... but now it's just got zombies too."

The sub-plot which has been added for the doubtless delight of young movie fans, if not for the purists, pretends that as if it's not hard enough for Mrs Bennet to marry off her many daughters, now the poor woman has to put up with a Black Plague ravaging the land and those unfortunates who die of it soon rise again from the grave, reincarnated as rotting monsters who dine on human flesh.

Which of course is a terrible trial for Mrs Bennet, for when you are desperately attempting to hitch up a daughter with Mr Darcy at a ball the last thing you need is the very bad form of the servants trying to eat the house guests.

But Mrs Bennet's reputation and the lives of the eligible gentry is saved when the five unmarried daughters – Elizabeth, Jane, Mary, Kitty and Lydia – reveal a previously-unknown talent for kung fu, sword-play and dagger-slashing as they gorily tackle the intruders at the Longbourn estate.

"There's some great fight sequences for the five of us girls working together like a really scary version of The Spice Girls," says Lily, "we get to kick a lot of butt and it's huge fun."

"It was so cool, as Lizzie I'm always going about the house armed with two swords. It's fresh, it's a reimagining of the characters. But the story is such a rich one anyway, only now it's also got really cool fight scenes, hordes of the undead – and I feel that Pride And Prejudice has always needed zombies."

With a scabbard strapped to her thigh beneath her dress, it's something of a costume change from when she danced with The Prince of Wales as the flirty Lady Rose in Downton Abbey and from the sounds of it Lily relished the role.

"It was weirdly wonderful," she says. "It was somewhat odd to be sitting between takes having a cup of tea in your Jane Austen corset and you'd look to your right and there would be a blood-dripping, half-eaten zombie extra."

But like the accomplished actress she is, Lily got into the part – although at times a little too much.

"In one scene I'm slicing and dicing a zombie before stomping its skull in with my foot. But when I practised these moments on the set, though, things took a turn for the worse."

"I didn't realise that the zombie corpse at my feet was an actual person, instead of what I thought was a prop. So when the time came, I plunged my foot down on the extra's head. Of course, it was totally by accident and he was okay, but nothing is easy to do in a corset."

To accomplish all of the fighting scenes convincingly, all of the actresses spent months in martial arts training and, says Lily's co-star Sam Riley, who plays Mr Darcy, the experience turned her into a walking weapon.

"There is a scene where Darcy's proposal to Elizabeth goes horribly wrong and we end up having a fight in the drawing room, where she attacks me with a poker and a letter-opener," said Sam.

"I can speak from the experience of that that Lily is pretty lethal. But she is going to be one of the best Elizabeth Bennets we've ever seen, if not the best. Lily has got a very natural and unforced charm which I think is perfect for Lizzie. She's certainly going to be the most kick-ass Elizabeth Bennet we've ever seen."

One thing is for sure, Lily James is going to be seen a very great deal in the coming weeks and months. Although she only graduated from London's Guildhall school of drama five years ago, now at the age of 26 she has already notched up considerable glittering credits; from Korinna the soldier in the heroic fantasy Wrath Of The Titans to the heroine British athlete in Fast Girls, the madam's daughter Poppy in The Secret Diary Of A Call Girl, her star part in Downton and of course the lead in Cinderella, for which she was unfairly trolled by envious halfwits on social media who claimed that her naturally-small body had been digitally-altered to make her the super-slim Cinders – a jibe to which Lily at the time well-responded, "Why do women always get pointed at for their bodies? And why is this whole thing happening and I'm constantly having to justify myself?"

"International Women's Day has just gone, and it just feels just a bit sad that it's still happening. On the one hand it's upsetting and on the other it's just boring. I'm just very healthy and I always have been."

Although hopefully not, perhaps the trolls will kick off again when Lily is back in tiny-waisted costumes in the New Year for a lead role in the BBC's epic version of War And Peace, in which she plays Natasha.

Like Pride And Prejudice, War And Peace is one of the classics most-adapted for the screen. The first was made 100 years ago, a silent movie version starring the Russian ballerina Vera Karalli. Since then there have been myriad takes on it; the 1956 movie starring Audrey Hepburn in Lily's part, a seven-hour film released in 1966 which took the Russians six years to film and the BBC's 1972 adaptation, all 17 hours of it, which starred Morag Hood as the captivating daughter of Count Rostov.

Then there's also been operatic versions, French and Italian versions, an "electropop opera" version and at least three lengthy adaptations for radio, including 10 hours of the one which was broadcast for all of New Year's Day this year. But the new BBC version, adapted by Andrew Davies, is set to be finest yet – with a stellar cast that includes Jim Broadbent, Gillian Anderson, Brian Cox, Greta Scaachi, Kenneth Cranham and Ade Edmondson.

"It's a huge book but Andrew is such an amazing adapter he's condensed it down, but he's kept the vitality and it feels accessible and I think the audience will be really drawn in," says Lily. "But you have to read the novel too because it's so addictive. The characters are so rich and I adore Tolstoy's tone and the humour with which he describes people. It made me laugh and it made me cry."

And acting it out also made her a little sore.

"There's a lot of riding sequences but riding side-saddle in the style of the time was difficult. It's very painful – much worse than the way men ride. You have to trap your legs on the saddle and I'm very glad we women don't have to do that anymore."

Although many have played Natasha before, it remains a dream role for a young actress of quality to take on and Lily clearly found the filming a joyous experience.

"I agree with Andrew Davies that Natasha is the most lovable romantic character in literature. As she goes on an enormous journey from child to woman, you can see all her flaws. She's very unabashed but in spite of that, you still really like her because she has a huge heart and a beautiful soul. She lives in the moment and she's completely uninhibited, but of course that leads to disaster.

"But she's such a vast character to portray – I love Natasha so much and it's quite a joy trying to bring her to life. I'm quite protective over her too, as an actor and as a woman it's a part that's going to stay with me. These big parts, these big heroines, they change you as an actor and as a person."

"The costumes are fantastic too, in fact I wouldn't have been able to play her without these wonderful costumes as how you're dressed really impacts on how you feel. I've loved wearing her flowing dresses – funnily enough, you actually feel more freedom in those than you do in jeans. The locations we've been to have been mind-blowing. When we were in Russia, we filmed at Catherine's Palace, outside the Winter Palace, when we filmed the ball there, I walked in and was stunned and completely silenced by the magnificent splendour of it all."

"Tolstoy is such a great writer because he always finds the core of a character. He hones in on what's important and universal, which is why War And Peace is such a classic. People always say this, but it feels very relevant. That's why great books are great books. This novel has stood the test of time because the themes Tolstoy discusses are eternal. The things these characters are talking about – love and death – are never going to change."

They are, however, likely to change Lily James's fortunes considerably. With War And Peace coming on the back of Cinderella, Pride And Prejudice And Zombies following Downton Abbey – in which she reappears as Lady Rose in the final episode this Christmas – the young actress is now widely tipped to become Britain's foremost and finest.

Next year she will take on another two leading roles, opposite Kevin Spacey and Jamie Foxx in the action crime comedy Baby Driver and as a Second World War British secret agent in The Kaiser's Last Kiss with Christopher Plummer. A genuinely-talented big new star is being very much born.

The last Downton Abbey will be screened on ITV on Christmas Day.

MARK HIX'S RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Pheasant escalope Holstein

Serves four

However carefully you cook it, pheasant can get a bit dry, but I've found that brief pan-frying in dishes like this comes up a treat. You could serve this with all sorts of things from a salad to pasta tossed in tomato sauce. Save the thighs for the ragout below, and the drumsticks aren't really that edible on their own so better used in a sauce, soup or stock.

4 skinless pheasant breasts
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
2-3tbsp flour
1 large egg, beaten
30-40g fresh white breadcrumbs
Vegetable or corn oil for frying
A good knob of butter
2 medium free-range eggs
4 anchovies, halved lengthways
½tbsp chopped parsley
2-3 pickled walnuts, quartered

Put one breast on a sheet of cling film that is at least double its size. With a meat or cutlet bat (a rolling pin or side of a cleaver will do), carefully bat each breast out into a neat 1cm-thick escalope. Season with salt and pepper then lightly coat with flour, patting any excess off with your hands, before passing the escalopes through the beaten egg and finally through the breadcrumbs.

Heat about 1cm of oil in a frying pan and cook the escalopes for 2-3 minutes on each side until golden, then add a knob of butter at the end of cooking and turn them once more.

Meanwhile, lightly fry the remaining eggs and place one on each escalope, then arrange the anchovies around the yolk and transfer to warmed plates. Melt the butter in a small frying pan until foaming, add the parsley and capers and spoon over the egg and escalopes. Serve immediately as they will go a bit cardboard-like if they hang around.

Step back into the cool atmosphere of Ed's Diner

IF you're looking for somewhere to rest your weary feet after a morning of frantic Christmas shopping over the next couple of weeks, I've found the perfect place writes Nicky Sweetland.

The newly opened Ed's Diner, at Westfield London is a great place to get away from the modern world and immerse yourself in the simple (and cooler!) 1950s.

Set on the top floor of Debenhams and overlooking the mall's amphitheatre, the little oasis acts as a tonic to alleviate some of the stress of the credit card usage and allows you to rest your overworked, aching arms, in an authentic American diner, complete with plush red leatherette, stainless steel and rock and roll tunes on the juke box.

I was shopping alone, but decided I would sample as much of the extensive menu as I could while was there. Well, it's rude not to isn't it?

I started with one of the milkshakes which was £4.95. I chose the banana and peanut butter flavour, which was served in a cute metal tankard and was actually a very filling but absolutely delicious start to my lunch.

For my main meal I went for a pulled pork option with my burger, which meant I had the smokey flavour of the pork atop my sumptuous beef burger all served in the classic sesame bun with cheese and salad. I was given the option of regular or large and decided I would really go for it, so I not only chose a large burger, but also went for the Ed's plate version for £14.30. This meant it came served with fries, onion rings and coleslaw. The burger was excellent, and even though all of the food is cooked when you order, didn't take too long to arrive.

After drinking the milkshake however, I only actually managed to eat around a third of the main, as I was just too full, so would suggest those with a realistic idea of their appetite should take that in to consideration when ordering.

I did also decide I had better sample dessert so went for the Lot of Waffle for £5.15. Again I was only really able to get a taste of this having made myself fully replete with the first two courses, but it was perfectly sweet and again a very large portion for the price.

The cost of my meal was £24.40, and considering I didn't need to eat again until the next day, was very reasonable for a great lunch in enjoyable surroundings.

For those with a good appetite, Ed's Diner can certainly help you to get through the chore of Christmas shopping.

Funny Girl ****

THE hugely anticipated revival of Funny Girl, starring Sheridan Smith, opened last week at the Menier Chocolate Factory and with tickets for the limited run selling out in just 45 minutes and a West End transfer already booked, reviews are a mere formality for the show which has already made history.

So, does the show and its beloved star live up to the high expectations, asks Nicky Sweetland.

The answer is without doubt a resounding yes and with tickets for the transfer to the Savoy Theatre also selling fast, I would urge you to get booking.

Smith stars as Fanny Brice, a lower east side New Yorker who becomes one of Broadway's biggest stars. The role was made famous by Barbara Streisand both on Broadway and in the 1968 film for which she shared the Best Actress Academy Award and which helped to gain her legendary status as a musical performer.

Smith is herself no stranger to awards and accolades, having previously won two Oliviers and a BAFTA as well as being appointed OBE earlier this year. Following in such renowned footsteps however, is no easy task, but Smith has become one of Britain's most beloved actresses and after watching this performance, it is obvious why she attracts such a following.

With a command of the stage which belies her stature, Smith has just the most adorable charm and brings a verve and panache to her clowning, which she's able to make feel extemporised. She redefines the term "showstopper" with first the rousing People, and then with the act two finale Don't Rain On My Parade.

It's in the comedy numbers however, where she really shows her stuff, with a timing that is perfection but always with a real substance behind the grin. In the more pensive moments as we follow her doomed relationship we completely understand that this woman has really only ever striven for affection.

For much of the show that affection is provided by the slick and suave Nick Arnstein, played by Darius Campbell, who doesn't show much complexity with his acting but sings like a dream in You Are Woman, I Am Man.

■ STAR TURNS: The hugely popular and critically-acclaimed actress Sheridan Smith stars as Fanny Brice, alongside Darius Campbell as Nick Arnstein in Funny Girl.

Success is assured for Funny Girl

■ THAT'S MY GIRL: Sheridan Smith commands the stage.

His dashing presence really adds to some of the big ensemble numbers and with the help of some clever direction by Michael Mayer, makes the musical feel big budget, old school but not a bit dated.

The inventive use of travelators in the staging also gives an added thrill to both the dance numbers and scene transitions and the hidden orchestra provide sympathetic accompaniment, although the "Cornet Man" on stage may wish to offer his services to help out the pit trumpeter on occasion.

With the fabulous Gypsy, starring Imelda Staunton, just vacating the Savoy Theatre, it seems only right that another revival with an equally astounding star turn should take up the reins and with Sheridan Smith at the helm this show is likely to become a smash hit when it reaches the West End in April. You'll laugh, you'll cry but you won't have to worry about anyone raining on this parade.

Billy Elliot at the Victoria Palace Theatre

To December 17
Billy Elliot is a funny, heart-warming and feel-good celebration of one young boy's dream in a gripping tale of triumph over adversity. This original story captured the hearts and minds of the world when the movie was released in October 2000. Nominated for three Oscars and 13 Bafta awards, this poignant film broke box office records across the world.

Elf the musical at the Dominion Theatre

To January 2
This year's festive must-see show is going to be this heart-warming extravaganza. The show, based on the 2003 film which starred Will Ferrell in the title role, was a smash hit on Broadway and is likely to be London's hottest ticket this season, despite the much reported high ticket prices. The show stars former Girls Aloud songstress Kimberley Walsh alongside West End heart throb Ben Forster, who will once again play the eponymous hero after wowing audiences last year in the role in both Plymouth and Dublin.

The Peter Pan Cup in Hyde Park

December 25
While children across London are eagerly waiting to unwrap their presents, members of the Serpentine Swimming Club are preparing to swim their traditional 100-yard (91-metre) Christmas Day race. Swimmers have met in London's Hyde Park on Christmas morning since 1864 to compete in the Christmas Day swim. The first Christmas Day swimming race was won by H. Coulter. He won a gold medal, which became the customary prize for the winner. Watch for free.

Carols in Trafalgar Square

To December 23
More than 50 carol groups each sing for an hour beneath the Christmas tree in Trafalgar Square to raise funds for voluntary or charitable organisations. Resembling something of a winter wonderland with the world-famous Christmas tree in place (an annual gift from Norway since 1947), the scene is set for an atmospheric recital of classics. From Deck the Halls and Good King Wenceslas to Ding Dong Merrily on High and The Holly and the Ivy, various tuneful groups sing to raise much needed cash for charity.

The World Goes Pop at the Tate Modern

Until January 24
Over 200 works by artists from Latin America to Asia celebrates the many faces of pop art. This show isn't about the pop art you know, it's about the pop art that escaped the history books. And it certainly packs a punch. It's fun, engaging, colourful, revelatory, opinionated, racy and stunning. Most importantly the show illuminates how pop wasn't confined to Andy Warhol's Factory in New York or Richard Hamilton's studio in London – it was a phenomenon that reached much further, practiced by artists in Peru, Israel, Argentina, Japan, Brazil and Eastern Europe. In an opening gallery painted scintillating red, the work quite literally pops off the walls. Here, traditional techniques are turned on their head, such as Japanese woodblock printing in Ushio Shinohara's 'Doll Festival', (1966) which is reinvigorated with the use of industrial materials like Perspex.

Winter Wonderland in Hyde Park

To January 3
This free-to-enter event includes a host of Christmas-themed fun and activities, including big top shows, an observation wheel and a huge Christmas market. Winter Wonderland provides fun, laughter and excitement for both adults and children. Skate around the stunning ice rink which circles the Victorian bandstand, enter the Magical Ice Kingdom with its 'ice forest' of frozen sculptures and gleaming ice castle, and enjoy the acrobatic wonders of shows at Zippos Circus and Cirque Besserk.

Cats at the London Palladium

Until January 2
Enduringly popular musical Cats will play at the London Palladium for a strictly limited run until January 2 2016. Beverley Knight is Grizabella the Glamour Cat. For more details visit the website catsthemusical.com

The Tiger Who Came To Tea at the Lyric Theatre

To January 10
Much loved story and for many has become a fable passed down through generations of families since it was first published in 1968. The book has been lovingly recreated into a musical play by David Wood and has once again taken up residence in the Lyric Theatre this Christmas. The production has been previously Olivier nominated and is likely to be a popular addition to the West End for many families hoping to give their children their first taste of theatre this year.

Through the Mill at London Theatre Workshop

To December 19
Through the Mill – a new play by Ray Rackham featuring a hit list of Judy Garland's greatest standards will get its world premiere in a three-week season at London Theatre Workshop from Tuesday, December 1 to Saturday, December 19. For more details visit their website londontheatreworkshop.com

British Museum of Food

To January 23
In a building at Borough Market across two floors.

Winterville 2015

To December 23
Winterville returns to Victoria Park, East London with another packed programme of attractions, entertainment and food and drink. Built around the Winterville clock tower, this little festive town offers seasonal classics and dazzling alternatives for all ages. Entry to Winterville is free, but most events and activities require a paid-for ticket.

It's Christmas, a perfect family show

Father Christmas Lyric Hammersmith *****

WITH so many family Christmas shows around it's difficult to know which one to choose, but a play starring the man himself has to be top of the list for me every time, writes Nicky Sweetland.

The Lyric Hammersmith is once again presenting Raymond Briggs' Father Christmas for this festive season and the play, which follows Santa as he prepares for his annual big night out, ticks every box as the perfect family production.

It's not too long, has some great music and leaves you with a wonderfully Christmassy warm glow. The play is based on Briggs' classic books, which were made famous by the 1991 animated short, and follows Santa as he awakes from a dream of sun, sea and sand only to find it is the busiest day of the year, Christmas Eve.

The grumpy old man in his pyjamas isn't obviously our hero from the start, and we actually begin by just watching Father Christmas go about his daily life as he does his household chores and cares for his pets, including his reindeer, of course. The magic really begins when darkness falls and Santa leaves the utilities of normality to travel across the globe to fulfil his vocation.

This charming adaptation has it all, from a wonderful set, some fabulous puppetry and an absolutely astounding performance from the great man himself.

I watched a lunchtime performance and was joined in the auditorium by a plethora of nursery schools bedecked in high-vis vests.

The three-year-olds were just as mesmerised by the staging as I was and it was lovely for me to reminisce back to when my offspring were that bit more wide-eyed and innocent.

Father Christmas runs at the Lyric Hammersmith until Christmas Eve. For more details visit their website lyric.co.uk

Silence is golden at mime festival

If you're looking for something to cheer you up after the party season has finished for another year, the London International Mime Festival might be just the ticket.

When it first started in 1977, the festival played over just two nights. Almost 40 years later, this January's festival will host 112 performances over 29 days from 18 companies.

Almost all the productions will be UK premières and held at prestigious venues like the Barbican, Southbank Centre and the Tate Modern. The event is directed by Helen Lannaghan and Joseph Seelig and gives audiences the chance to see the very best and newest contemporary visual theatre, including cutting edge circus-theatre, animation and puppetry, mask, physical and object theatre.

The 2016 festival opens at the Shaw Theatre on Saturday, January 9, with Marcel performed by Complicité original members, Jos Houben & Marcello Magni. It then runs until February 6 at various venues across the city and includes Australia's world-famous acrobatic troupe Circa, Glasgow-based Al Seed, winner of a 2015 Total Theatre Award, and a special festival highlight from Jos Houben, who will reprise his acclaimed performance-demonstration The Art of Laughter, which explains and illustrates what makes people laugh.

Full programme details, including workshops and after-show discussion dates will be available online at the website www.mimelondon.com

■ COLOUR CONTRAST: Lee Mead rises to stardom in Joseph and the Technicolour Dreamcoat.

Singer delivers a show Mead in heaven

West End critic Nicky Sweetland enjoys Lee Mead's Christmas concert at the Garrick Theatre

Lee Mead, Some Enchanted Evening Garrick Theatre *******

TELEVISION and stage star Lee Mead helped to kick-start the festive season in the West End last week with a special Christmas concert at the Garrick Theatre.

The singer who won the BBC1 talent search to find the leading man for the revival of Joseph and the Amazing Technicolour Dreamcoat in 2007 has completed a mini tour with his show which boasts some reimagined takes of classic musical songs from yesteryear.

The show was entitled Some Enchanted Evening and lived up to its name as the audience, mostly made up of many of the singer's hardcore fans, were enthralled by Lee's sublime vocals and cheeky charm.

Taking to the stage along with his four-piece band wearing a garish Christmas jumper and pretending to puff on a pipe, Lee is the consummate showman and his fans, many of whom are of the more mature female variety, swooned at his every word.

The production featured songs from Lee's new album, which is set to be released on Mother's Day in 2016, but also included some Christmas classics with a wonderful big band feel and had the addition of a very over-zealous snow machine which helped to provide that extra festive sparkle.

Lee has played numerous roles in the West End but has most recently been on our screens as Lofty in the BBC1 hospital drama Casualty. Many of his co-stars were in the audience to support the popular entertainer and he was joined on stage by Amanda Henderson, who plays nurse Robyn Miller in the TV show.

While Lee took a break, Amanda showed off her ample singing talent – first with a fabulous swing medley before teaming up with Lee for a magical version of the Yuletide favourite, Baby It's Cold Outside. Henderson went on to show her real class as a performer in act two when she absolutely brought the house down with the Wizard of Oz standard, Over the Rainbow.

Lee was also joined by Tony winning actress Tracey Bennett for a very rousing version of the Garland/Streisand duet Get Happy/Happy Days and by West End favourite Steven Rahman Hughes for a really unusual take on the Barbara Streisand classic, Don't Rain On My Parade from the currently very en vogue musical, Funny Girl.

With plenty of chat and giggles, the show felt like a relaxed and intimate affair even though the 650-seat theatre was virtually sold out, and the odd dropped lyric here and there just added to general atmosphere of fun.

The absolute highlight of the concert however, was Lee's tribute to the victims of the recent terrorist attacks in Paris with his very moving rendition of Bring Him Home from Les Miserables, which left the auditorium in absolute silence.

Lee's new album, entitled

Some Enchanted Evening, will be available in March, and the singer is planning some more tour dates on its release. If the concert at the Garrick is anything to go by, you would be well advised to book a ticket for a great night of high quality music and humorous japes.

Lee will also be playing the madcap inventor Caractacus Potts in the new touring production of Chitty Chitty Bang Bang when it visits the New Wimbledon Theatre next summer. For more details visit his website leemead.co.uk

Christmas crackers from Kylie

Kylie Christmas at the Royal Albert Hall *****

I FELT like I had arrived in Christmas party central at the Royal Albert Hall last week as Kylie Minogue took to the stage for a one-off, sold-out concert writes Nicky Sweetland.

It was the first time Kylie had headlined the iconic venue and my goodness, the pint sized princess of pop certainly knows how to throw a shindig. With Santa hats on every seat the auditorium was bedazzled with sumptuous lighting, which set the scene for a truly joyful and triumphant show.

The star took to the stage amid dancers with pom poms and candy canes, and looked stunning in a white tutu as she treated the gathered multitude to many of the songs from her new album, Kylie Christmas, as well as performing some of her classic hits, which encouraged a storming response from the auditorium.

Highlights included the Pretenders classic 2000 Miles, for which Kylie was joined on stage by the legendary Chrissie Hynde, and the really sassy and sexy ■ CLASSICS: Kylie Minogue.

Santa Baby, which the star performed along with her Christmas tree backing dancers, in thigh-high, fur-trimmed boots and a racey red mini dress.

Proving Christmas is a time for family, Kylie's sister Dannii Minogue appeared in a stunning silver dress to help turn up the heat with 100 Degrees, the duet which also features on the album, and there was a very kindred mood as the audience were encouraged to belt out festive favourites Jingle Bells and the Twelve Days of Christmas.

It's with the dazzling disco tunes that Kylie really shows her mettle however, and the 5,000-strong audience were all on their feet and bouncing in unison to her biggest hits, like the dance floor filler Spinning Around and 80s anthem The Locomotion.

The cheer-filled Christmas spectacular also had a very fitting finale as snow and balloons were released onto the united flock and the idol finished the show with one of her earliest hit songs, the now vintage oldie, Especially For You.

The stage was adorned with a dazzling tree to act as the backdrop for the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, who along with Kylie's own band provided the musical accompaniment with assistance from the National Youth Choir of Great Britain. What a fantastic opportunity for the youngsters to perform with such an absolute musical goddess and I'm sure they all felt just like I did, very Lucky, Lucky, Lucky to be there.

Authentic Sardinian food, Sapori Sardi is a fine Italian restaurant located in Fulham Road.

"simple, yet fantastico!"

Adrian Seal - Restaurant reviewer for getwestlondon

Sapori Sardi is a haven of authentic Sardinian food and carefully selected Italian wines. Sapori Sardi is owned and run by husband and wife team, Piero and Giul, who have created a warm and friendly atmosphere and have been known to sit and chat with their diners over a glass of Mirto at the end of a busy day!

Piero Taris (Owner & Chef) was born in Sardinia and arrived in London in 1986, aged 26 and full of enthusiasm and passion for the unique flavours of his homeland.

Piero uses authentic products imported from Sardinia together with fresh local produce to prepare a menu that is refined and innovative whilst maintaining the strict traditions of his distinctive region. He has been cooking since he was 11, learning to bake bread from his father, Giulio, who was a Master baker in the Italian army during the 2nd World War.

Piero began working in a kitchen at 16 and was Head Chef at the age of 21 at the renowned Torre dei Corsari in Costa Verde. He has taught Italian Cuisine to chefs at some of the world's finest hotels including the Sheraton Group.

You'll find traditional Sardinian dishes such as Spaghetti Bottariga, Gnocchetti Campidanese and Gamberoni al limone.

Hasselbaink hails 'magnificent' fans

NEW Queens Park Rangers manager Jimmy Floyd Hasselbaink took satisfaction from Saturday's goal-less draw with Burnley and then paid tribute to the "magnificent" Rangers fans.

The Dutchman, in charge for the first time since his appointment, received rapturous applause as he waved to all four sides of the ground when introduced before the game.

He said: "The welcome I got was just magnificent – and a big thank you to the QPR supporters. They made me feel one of them and I really appreciate it."

Before the game, Hasselbaink had used social media to express his delight at being offered the chance to manage in the Championship at Loftus Road just 13 months after being handed his first management role in English football at Burton Albion, then of League Two.

"I feel absolutely privileged to be handed the opportunity to manage Queens Park Rangers #QPR" Hasselbaink (@jf9hasselbaink) tweeted to his 35,300 Twitter followers.

Tweets

In five subsequent carefully worded tweets that morning, he added: "It is my intention to leave no stone unturned to ensure this club move forward and meet with success. #QPR

"I owe a huge debt of gratitude to the owners for giving me the opportunity to manage this great club. #QPR

"The overwhelming messages of support from the fans following my appointment gives me good cause to be very optimistic going forward. #QPR.

"I am confident hard work and unity will eventually bring its own rewards. #QPR

"They are a club steeped in history and one I have always taken a keen interest in and privately harboured dreams of managing one day #QPR."

Hasselbaink got QPR playing with vigour and positive intent against promotion contenders Burnley.

And he would have been celebrating his first victory in the Hoops' dug-out had Grant Hall's goal-bound header not been cleared off the line by Scott Arfield in the dying seconds of a rousing game in W12.

"I learnt a lot today," said the immaculately black-suited Hasselbaink. "I learnt that QPR has magnificent support.

"I learnt that we have a team that is willing – willing to work for each other.

"There were a lot of positives to take from the game. We were committed, we did a lot of things right.

"The guys are a tight group. They want to succeed and be better players.

"If we play like we did today, especially in the first half, I am confident we can be successful.

"I thought we expressed ourselves well,

LOFTUS ROAD RANGERS REVIEW

With Tony McDonald

especially in the first half when we were the better team. The players showed that they want to do things right.

learn things

"We suffered a little in the second half but that can sometimes be a good thing, because you learn things about the players.

"Let's not forget one thing, we came up against a very, very good team. Burnley are very well organised, very hard to break down and I thought we gave them a really good game.

"You have to respect that good teams are always going to have spells but I thought we coped very well when they had those spells.

"I thought we did ever so well."

QPR were unable to find a breakthrough, despite being the leading second tier scorers at home.

But an upbeat Hasselbaink added: "I'll take a 0-0 because the performance level was right.

"If we keep performing at this level, we should win more than we lose."

For that to happen, though, QPR need a fully fit Charlie Austin firing on all cylinders.

His ongoing calf problem confined him to the subs' bench until he received the call from 'JFH' with 30 minutes left to play against his former club.

"Charlie isn't quite where we need him to be, fitness-wise," said the new boss, who knows what is required from a team's main striker. "We want to make sure that he has another really good platform to come back.

"We can't afford for him to be missing for a long time, because he is an important player for us."

Hasselbaink has vowed that no other club will be permitted to 'pinch' Austin in the January transfer window, although R's can't be very confident of hanging on to a proven goalscorer who can walk away for nothing, on a free transfer, next summer when his current contract expires.

Hasselbaink was speaking before Tuesday's home league game against Championship leaders Brighton and Saturday's visit to Bristol City, where he will be hopeful of collecting his first win.

■ QPR under-18s will face a very difficult task against Manchester United in the FA Youth Cup on Tuesday, December 22.

The third round tie will be played at Leigh Sports Village (7.00pm), where admission on the night is free.

Meanwhile, at Stamford Bridge, Chelsea will easily justify their short odds-on price to send Sunderland packing, in what could be the start of a run of victories over the hectic holiday period.

No doubt Sam Allardyce will be fine-tuning the red-and-white striped bus ready for parking across the halfway line but it will take more than that to keep out a Chelsea side ready to start climbing the table. If Blues score early, they could go on to notch four or five against a woeful Black Cats defence.

In fact, I have every confidence in Blues returning from their next away game, at Manchester United, with all three points too. Mourinho will win the battle of the 'Special Ones'.

Good luck – and remember to always bet responsibly.

■ GOING off: Flashback to a stormy night when PSG last came to Stamford Bridge

French champs await Chelsea

■ FOR the third consecutive season, Chelsea will face Paris-Saint Germain in the Champions League.

Monday's Round of 16 draw in Nyon produced the toughest possible outcome for Blues.

Last season the teams met at the same stage, with the French champions progressing on away goals after a dramatic game, while in 2014 Blues edged a tight quarter-final encounter.

Second leg at home

Having qualified for the knockout stages of the competition as group winners, Chelsea will play the second leg at home.

The first leg will take place in Paris on Tuesday, February 16, with the return at Stamford Bridge on Wednesday, March 9.

Laurent Blanc's side sailed through their group with 13 points from six matches, despite finishing runners-up to Real Madrid, and won't be fazed by another trip to west London.

Unbeaten PSG are running away with Ligue One, 17 points clear of the chasing pack with 15 wins and three draws from their first 18 games.

By drawing them out of the hat again, Jose Mourinho's team will avoid a less daunting test against one of PSV Eindhoven (Holland), Benfica (Portugal), Juventus (Italy), Roma (Italy) and Gent (Belgium).

For Chelsea followers, the draw will evoke memories of PSG's previous visit to SW6, on that stormy night last March, when Zlatan Ibrahimovic was red-carded, former Blues defender David Luis forced extra-time with a late header and Thiago Silva sent the 10-men through on the away goals rule after a pulsating game ended 2-2 and the tie 3-3 on aggregate.

Mixed reaction to Finn call-up

■ MIDDLESEX will probably view Steven Finn's call-up to the England Test squad for their cricket tour of South Africa with mixed feelings.

The 26-year-old fast bowler missed the series against Pakistan in October and November because of a bone stress injury.

But he returned to action last weekend for England Lions in the United Arab Emirates, playing in two Twenty20 matches.

"I've been really pleased with the way things have gone with the Lions," he said.

Excited

"I've bowled my overs and my foot has come through fine. I'm excited by the prospect of linking up with the team out in South Africa."

However, Finn is unlikely to feature in the first Test in Durban on Boxing Day and his county will have all fingers crossed that he comes through the tour unscathed and is fit and ready to bowl next spring.

Rather than risk further damage to his foot, Finn could probably have done with having his feet up this winter.

■ MIDDLESEX paceman Steven Finn will be hoping to return from South Africa in good shape

■ JIMMY Floyd Hasselbaink feels "privileged".

Monday, December 28

Manchester United v CHELSEA, 5.30
Huddersfield Town v QPR, 3.00

Tuesday, December 29

FULHAM v Rotherham United, 7.45

THANKS must go to QPR for their part in landing us a 100-1 fourfold draw accumulator on Saturday.

Burnley are never an easy side to break down while, on the other hand, they are not the most lethal in front of goal either, so a stalemate on Jimmy Floyd Hasselbaink's Hoops debut was always on the cards.

Along with the Loftus Road encounter, I also included the draws at West Ham (v Stoke City), Mansfield (v Leyton Orient) and Derby County (v Brighton), where Rams' Chris Martin went to the top of my Chrimbo card list with an 88th-minute penalty equaliser!

As all punters can imagine, enduring stoppage time at four grounds as the seconds ticked by before the final whistles sounded was pure purgatory. But you need plenty of luck on your side in this game.

This Saturday, I'll be all over the goals market for QPR's game at Bristol City. Only second-from-bottom Rotherham United have conceded more than the 33 goals the Cherries have leaked this season.

More to the point, 18 of those went in at Ashton Gate, where they have won just twice in 10 home league matches and were hammered by Fulham not so long ago.

So I'm backing JFH to secure his first win on the road as QPR boss.

I'd also be tempted to have a modest punt on Fulham at healthy odds to win at Bolton, who have all sorts of problems on and off the field. Although these two teams occupy the bottom two places in the Championship form guide, based on their last six league matches, Fulham have too much creative flair for Bolton's liking.

I'll take Moussa Dembele to keep his good run going in an away win for Whites.

‘Dreaming’ of fourth place

JOSE Mourinho will be looking to Saturday’s league match with Sunderland as the springboard needed to push the Blues up the Premier League, away from the relegation zone and, perhaps, a charge towards the top four and a coveted Champions League slot.

The Chelsea boss will be looking to emulate last season’s 3-1 win at The Bridge, when a Diego Costa goal and a brace from Loic Remy on the final day of the season saw Blues clinch the League title eight points ahead of Manchester City.

In a season in which anyone can beat anyone, and too many have beaten Chelsea so far, Mourinho needs the boost of three points from the Black Cats to send a signal to those they face in the hectic Christmas and New Year period that they are still a force to be reckoned with.

He said: “Before we lost three points against Bournemouth I was absolutely convinced about finishing fourth in the table and I was convinced about a great December for us.

● By LWN reporter Paul Lagan

“The reality is that some clubs are doing well and others are not capable of doing what they are used to. It’s not easy for the top clubs to win three, four, five or 10 matches in a row now, so who knows?”

Dream of fourth

“If we can get a run of four or five consecutive victories, because none of the other clubs are doing that, maybe we have a chance to make up the distance and dream of finishing fourth. While it’s mathematically possible, we have to try.”

One man who thinks Chelsea can not only up their performance but even become champions again is former Blues and England star Joe Cole.

Cole, 34, who cost £6.6million from West Ham in 2003, and for seven years was a star of Chelsea’s midfield, believes Mourinho has what it takes to make Chelsea great again.

“Anything is possible, and that’s why we watch football,” said Cole, now playing his trade with League One promotion contenders Coventry City.

“You can’t rule them out as champions. That team could beat everyone from now until the end of the season.

“The main thing you’ve got to think about is you’ve got the best manager in the world there – fact. That’s not down to opinion, he’s the most decorated over the different leagues.

“I’m not saying it’s going to happen but it’s football. It’ll be interesting in the next few weeks. The fans haven’t turned, they’re right behind the manager and the chairman.

“For Chelsea to move forward, you’ve got to stick with the manager and let him do what he does best. I don’t think anyone can dispute his record and I’m sure he’ll be relishing turning it around.

“What separates Mourinho from the rest is his common touch, how he relates to his players and gets the best out of each individual in the squad, whether you’re the captain or the third-choice goalkeeper.”

Oscar, who starred in last week’s 2-0 home Champions League win against Porto that secured top spot in the group, recognises that Chelsea must replicate that high level of performance in the match against Sunderland at The Bridge and their other upcoming Christmas fixtures against Watford and Manchester United.

He said: “Because everyone knew it was an important game, we were very concentrated. We knew we needed to win, everybody was confident and we played better.

“The manager said to stay confident and show our quality. The team played very well and we won the game. But we need to play like this in the Premier League as well. We need to win our next game, it’s very important for us.”

Speaking ahead of Monday’s visit to high-flying Leicester City, Oscar added: “We need to win two or three games in a row to keep the confidence.

“The win against Porto was important for everyone. It’s difficult when we lose a game, for the players and Jose.

“We now need to focus on the Premier League and play like we did against Porto.”

One man in desperate need to score to bolster his flagging confidence is striker Diego Costa, and Oscar is confident that better times beckon for the Brazil-born Spanish front man.

“Diego played very well and he knows he’s very important for the team,” he said. “Hopefully in the next game he will play even better. He tried everything to score a goal.

Focus on Craven Cottage

By TONY McDONALD

Old failings haunt new man

EVEN in this unpredictable, volatile world there are certain things that can be relied upon 100 per cent: death, taxes . . . and Fulham conceding a goal from a corner.

Sure enough, it happened again on Saturday, when west London neighbours Brentford visited Craven Cottage and salvaged a 2-2 draw, which was the least they deserved for their first half dominance.

New ‘Senior Coach’ Stuart Gray is the latest incumbent to bemoan this common Fulham failing. Speaking after his first game in the dug-out, as successor to Kit Symons and previous interim Peter Grant, he said: “After getting our noses in front, I felt we’d go on and win it but our Achilles heel this season has been defending corners. That’s 14 we’ve conceded this season, so that’s frustrating.

“With this group of players we’re underachieving. We need to stop giving away soft goals. At the moment we’re not stopping enough free balls into the box and defending them properly.

“But I can’t fault the effort and commitment and I’m pleased with the response we had after going 1-0 down. Probably a draw was a fair result but we’ve got to start putting points on it and we went for the win.”

Fulham fell behind to an Alan Judge penalty after Jazz Richards tripped Jake Bidwell millimetres inside the 18-yard box. Whites levelled through James Tarkowski’s headed own goal before Moussa Dembélé netted his 10th of the season with a deft finish to put Fulham in front, only for Jack O’Connell to equalise.

This was an open, end-to-end derby clash that either side could have won. The fixture compiler could have been kinder than to present Gray with a Bees team that had lost only one of its previous nine games.

“We were playing a side full of confidence,” said Gray. “They’ve got a new manager (Dean Smith) and they started a bit brighter than us. We were disappointed to go a goal down. Richards got a touch on the ball but Bidwell’s momentum took him over his leg.

“I told them: ‘Make sure you come off that pitch physically knackered and they’ve done that, they’ve put a shift in, we just didn’t get that bit of luck.’

Fulham visit the Championship’s bottom club,

Bolton Wanderers, on Saturday but who knows whether Gray – assisted by Steve Wigley – will still be in charge? When the former Sheffield Wednesday and Southampton manager was brought in last week, Fulham announced that it was simply a ship-steadying exercise.

Chief football officer Mike Rigg said: “The search for a permanent head coach goes on but it is important to ensure we focus fully on getting results back on track while this process continues.

“Stuart has a proven track record in both coaching and management with caretaker spells at Burnley and Wolverhampton Wanderers prior to joining Sheffield Wednesday as head coach. He also had a full season in charge at Sheffield and secured their highest finish for six years, along with a record number of clean sheets.

“We all know that we have suffered from defensive frailties all season and Stuart will be focusing on that straight away. He has first-hand knowledge of the Championship and knows how to get the very best out of a group of players, so his work with the first team will be pivotal as the search continues.”
